News Briefs

Benny Bufano Day — in commemoration of the late sculptor's many contributions to the City, the University of California and the world of art — will be celebrated Monday, April 5. Bufano Day at UCSF will be recognized by the unveiling of an untitled Bufano statue in Saunders Court (see calendar, Monday, April 5). This is the second Bufano statue to be permanently loaned to the UCSF campus. The first piece — a mother bear and two cubs — is located on Millberry Union Plaza facing Parnassus Ave. and was given to UCSF in 1968 by Dr. and Mrs. Meyer Schindler to commemorate the 100th anniversary of UC and the 10th anniversary of Millberry Student Union. Dr. & Mrs. Schindler also were responsible for getting the second Bufano statue on campus. Mrs. Schindler will give a talk on the life and art of Bufano, Friday, April 2, noon, Rm. 300, HSW. Speakers at the April 5 ceremony include Mayor George Moscone, Dr. Meyer Schindler and Dr. John B. deC. M. Saunders. Chancellor Francis A. Sooy, M.D., will be moderator.

The UC Hospital Auxiliary has built a meditation room and adjoining consultation room which will open Friday, April 9. (Open house to be held April 9 and 10; see calendar.) In addition, Moffitt Hospital has two adjoining rooms on the eighth floor where patients or their families can be alone with their thoughts or consult with their doctor or clergyman.

UCSF Medal, given each year to four distinguished citizens for major personal contribution to the campus and community, were announced in March by Chancellor Francis A. Sooy, M.D.: Gardiner Johnson, San Francisco attorney, and former state assemblyman, for his help in obtaining state funding and appropriations for UC's first major capital outlay for the San Francisco campus; Mary D. Olney, M.D., pediatrician, for her work in diabetes and heart disease, and particularly for her involvement with the Bearskin Meadows camping project for diabetic children, which she helped start in 1938; Troy C. Daniels, Ph.D., Dean Emeritus of the UCSF School of Pharmacy, under whose guidance as dean from 1944 to 1967 the school grew to its present place of preeminince; Milo E. Rowell, Fresno attorney and civic leader, for his efforts in bringing about the development of the new UCSF medical education program in the Central San Joaquin Valley.

A New PhD Program in Human Development and Aging of the Graduate Division and Department of Psychiatry will begin fall, 1976. The Campus has had an NIH-funded research and training program in Adult Development and Aging for eighteen years, under the direction of Marjorie Fiske Lowenthal, and has just received University and legislative approval to grant the degree. The Program is inviting applications from graduate students in the behavioral sciences who have a master's degree or the equivalent. Students in the health sciences and humanities will also be considered, providing they have adequate behavioral science training.

Alcoholism "Drop In" Center now open for counseling and referral for those with drinking problems. Located at 400 Parnassus, room A-41, the clinic is open every Monday and Wednesday from 12:30 to 5 p.m. Working with several community alcoholism programs, the center offers assistance to campus staff, clinic patients and others, including family members. Telephone 666-3219. Tom Swanson, director.

A Women's Program in the Health Sciences has been established to offer fellowships to women who are scholars already established in the health sciences; graduate students who have family or employment obligations and community leaders working in health-related community projects. The Graduate Division will administer the fellowship awards, sponsor research, classes, lectures, continuing education programs, conferences and publications; establish a national resource, referral and guidance center. Minority women are encouraged to participate. Lucy Ann Geiselman, Ph.D., Assistant Vice Chancellor-Public Programs and Continuing Education, and Martha Sturm White, Ph.D., researcher and lecturer in the Department of Psychiatry's Human Development Program, are co-directors of the new program. The first phase will feature a series of Tuesday noontime lectures in the Chancellor's Conference room, 118-S, through April and May for women students, faculty and employees. (See Calendar.)

The Nasal Clinic of the Department of Otolaryngology is now prepared to do quantitative testing of the sense of smell for any patient referred by UC personnel. The clinic is interested in testing for anosmia, hyposmia and persons with hyper-acute sense of smell. (See calendar for Monday.)
